Studious observations of results have proven conclusively that judicious fertiization pays whether the season are always favorable or not.

The Charleston Exposition is no little thing. Just read something about its scope and the attention it is attracting abroad and be convinced.

Intoxicants are costly at any price, but infinitely increased is the price one pays when he pays for liquor the money that ought to be applied to debts.

Every man and boy that can find honest employment ought to be diligently at it. Idleness, especially at this season generally contributes to results that are long to be regretted.

price is far below the mark consistent therewith. Every indication points to higher prices. Hold it if you can.

Many merchants will go to the wall through failures to collect for advances made this year, and many poor debters will realize text year the hardships entailed by a short crop year. The best plan is to pay the utmost possible cent and make the right kind of arrangements.
